Nepeta faassenii 'Dropmore'

Nepeta faassenii 'Dropmore'

Bushy, aromatic favorite blooms heavily

Considered the best catmint because the plant has a dense habit, yet still produces armloads of flower spikes. These are bigger and darker lavender than the species, making for a more dramatic display.

Centranthus 'Coccineus'

Plumes of deliciously scented, long-lasting flowers

Clumps of fleshy green leaves wave great plumes of aromatic rosy-red flowers for weeks on end. Thrives in rocky or average soil, in curbside beds and on slopes and embankments, where it brings welcome exuberance.

Dianthus 'Bath's Pink'

Brimming with spicy-scented blooms

Few other flowers can keep up with this prolific bloomer – it literally covers itself in fragrant, fringed single blooms for many weeks. It often reblooms in the fall, too. Especially heat-tolerant.
